35 INJURED AS GERMAN POLICE FIRE ON COMMUNIST RIOTERS

SHANGHAI SOCCER XI ARRIVES

Stanley Gash Most Optimistic.

INTERPORT TEAM PRACTICE AT HAPPY VALLEY.

The Shanghai Interport soccer eleven arrived in the Colony this morning by the President Hoover, which flew the Shanghai Association flag at her foremast as she came down the Harbour.

Officials of the Hong Kong F.A. met the visitors and conducted them to the Peninsula Hotel where they are to remain during their visit. The team will be seen at practice on the Club ground this afternoon at 3.30 p.m. in preparation for the Interport game on Thursday.

Interviewed by the China Mail, Stanley Gash, the skipper of the Northern team, said that the whole team were in the best of spirits and very confident.

Gash said that if the Shanghai team combined well together there was every reason to believe that they would take the Telegraph Cup back to Shanghai.

"The Shanghai forward line is a very light one, in fact, the lightest forward line ever fielded by the Northern team in any interport game, but they have everything in their favour with regard to speed and ball control."

Asked why so many changes had been made in the northern side, Gash replied that difficulties regarding leave was the reason in most cases.

McTavish, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, was unable to make the trip owing to the near proximity of his home leave.

N. Z. Lee, who consented to fill the centre forward position, later found that he was unable to go on account of sending in his acceptance two days too late, another player having been invited to play in the meanwhile.

Hans Park, said Gash, who was one of the outstanding players in the trial series was unable to get leave on account of his short service with the Shanghai Police Force.

Y. Y. Chow, the Tung Hwa custodian who was invited, was seriously injured three days before the team sailed and so was unable to travel. Bradley, who fills this position, should give a creditable display in his first interport match.

Taking the Shanghai team all round, Gash said that the strength lay in the defence. Although the forwards were the best that Shanghai could field, they were on the light side.

SHANGHAI GOLFERS ARRIVE.

Proceed To Fanling At Once.

The Shanghai Interport Golf team arrived in the Colony this morning by the President Hoover after travelling down with the soccer interport.

The players were at once taken out to Fanling where they were given an opportunity to have a loosening up.

The players indulged in driving practice coming down on the Hoover and need only practice on the greens and an acquaintance with the New Course to place them in good fettle for their game against Hong Kong on Wednesday.

TWO WHALES SEEN OFF STANLEY

Residents Watch Huge Fish Spouting.

Two whales, both well over 30 feet in length, were seen by four local residents off Stanley yesterday afternoon at about 4 p.m. The huge creatures were in view for more than half an hour, and were only about 200 yards from the shore.

Describing the incident to the China Mail, Mr. J. J. Cook of Messrs. Gilman's said that he went out on to the promontory at Stanley with three companions and they had a clear view of the rare visitors.

Both whales were swimming to and fro for a distance of about 100 yards, near the surface of the water, obviously feeding on a shoal of fish in the vicinity.

Every few moments they would rise above the surface of the water and the white of their bellies could be seen, also their open jaws. They were also spouting.

Mr. Cook's companions were, Miss Dalziel, Miss Westlund and Mr. A. E. Cox.

FOUR POLICE STABBED IN FIGHTING

100 ARRESTS IN BERLIN POLITICAL RIOTS

REDS BREAK-UP HUGE NAZI DEMONSTRATION

BERLIN, TO-DAY.

THIRTY-FIVE CASUALTIES AND 100 ARRESTS WERE REPORTED YESTERDAY EVENING, RESULTING FROM THE CLASH BETWEEN THE NAZIS AND COMMUNISTS. FOUR POLICEMEN WERE STABBED IN THE FIGHTING, AND FIREARMS HAD TO BE USED AGAINST THE MENACING COMMUNIST CROWDS, WHO WERE BENT ON BREAKING UP THE HUGE NAZI RALLY.

Permission was given to the Nazis to hold a demonstration in Buelow Square, where the Communist headquarters are situated, for the unveiling by Herr Hitler of a memorial to Horst Wessel, the Nazi hero.

With the intention of impeding the grand march, the Communists erected fire barriers in the east end of the city, piling mattresses on dustbins and barrels. Throughout the day the fire brigades were kept busy keeping the flames under control.

Later in the day the position grew more serious and many clashes occurred between the rival parties. The police, in addition to dispersing demonstrations with batons, had to fire into the crowd on several occasions. Many other skirmishes took place when gangs of Communists waylaid individual Nazis and beat them.

The Communists have announced that they will hold protest demonstrations lasting for one week, to be inaugurated with a mass meeting outside the former Imperial Palace, providing police permission is obtainable.

Ten thousand Nazi assembled in Buelow Square in a snowstorm before the march to cemetery where Herr Hitler unveiled the memorial to the murdered Nazi, Herr Wessel. The programme was carried through in spite of the Communist interference.

The Communists affirm their intention of holding a counter-demonstration and threaten to proclaim a general strike if there is any more bloodshed.

Nazi Gains.

Berlin.

The success of the National Socialists in the Diet elections in the tiny state of Lippe where they were able to increase their former poll by 5,500 to 38,800 out of a total of 98,000 votes cast, is expected to stiffen the party's opposition to the von Schleicher Cabinet.

A return to the "old fighting methods" by which the National Socialists have become what they are to-day was inaugurated during a mass-meeting of several thousand members of the various stormtroop detachments at Weimar by the Chief himself.

"After every National Socialist victory," Herr Hitler said, "attempts have been made to make the victory illusory by inveigling us into negotiations aiming at some compromise solution, but these attempts did not and will not succeed as I am more than ever resolved not to yield an inch of ground."

Baronet's Son To Marry An American

Prominent Families To Be United.

London, To-day.

The engagement has just been announced for the marriage of Captain Neville Lawrence, younger son of Sir Walter R. Lawrence, Bt., and Miss Sarah Butler, only daughter of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

Sir Walter Lawrence was Private Secretary in India to Lord Curzon from 1898 to 1903 and Chief of Staff for the Prince of Wales' tour in 1905. He wrote an interesting book four years ago of his reminiscences of India after the mutiny.

Dr. Butler, who last year was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize jointly with Miss Jane Adams, has visited Europe regularly for 40 years.

Miss Butler has been for nearly ten years vice-chairman of the New York Republican State Committee, and was a delegate to the Presidential Conventions of 1928 and 1932. On her father's side she is related to the Buchanan family of Leny whose seat at the Pass of Leny at the entrance to the highlands of Scotland has been in their possession for over 600 years.

The marriage will take place in April and the couple will live in London.

COL. KILGORE WILL LEAD MARINES IN SHANGHAI.

San Francisco.

Colonel Fred Duane Kilgore, chief of staff under Major General Logan Feland, commander of the department of the Pacific U.S. marine corps, has been appointed to succeed the late Colonel Richard S. Hooker as commander of marines in Shanghai.

Col. Hooker died recently while on a Christmas shopping tour. Kilgore is scheduled to sail for Shanghai February 17.

POPULAR COLONY WEDDING

Mr. William Kay Weds Miss Grace Williams.

LONG SERVICE IN HONG KONG EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

A wedding of considerable interest in the Colony was solemnised in St. John's Cathedral this afternoon, when Miss Grace Kathleen Williams, eldest daughter of Captain and Mrs. G. J. Williams of Coventry, Warwickshire, became the bride of Mr. William Kay, M.A. (Edin), son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watt Kay, of Dundee, Scotland, and a popular member of the Education Department.

The Dean, Very Rev. A. Swann, M.A., officiated at the ceremony and was assisted by the Rev. N. Evans, M.A.

The bride, who was given away by Capt. P. S. Cannon, M.A., A.E.C., was gracefully attired in a regal gown of ivory satin fern-leaf shadow lace falling in a short train, which was trimmed with orange-blossoms. Her long embroidered Brussels net veil held in place by a tiny cap of orange-blossoms completed a very charming bridal ensemble by "Eunice." She carried a sheaf of white gladioli and purple and white heather.

The Misses Edna Blackburn and Elsie Lammert, who attended as bridesmaids, were attired in "Love-in-the-Mist" blue over-rose pink georgette gowns with lace coaters trimmed with white fur, created by "Eunice." Silver leaves were worn on their heads and each carried a bouquet of pastel shaded sweet pears.

Mrs. A. H. McBride, who was Matron of Honour, wore a charming creation of honey blesse Chantilly lace over coral pink trimmed with brown fox, and a pretty velvet toque with veil to tone, also executed by "Eunice." She carried a bouquet of coral shaded gladioli.

Mr. E. S. Carter discharged the duties of best man. The service was fully choral. Mr. F. Mason, A.R.C.O., L.T.C.L., officiating at the organ.

A largely attended reception was subsequently held at the Hong Kong Hotel Roof Garden.

The happy couple later left for their honeymoon, which is being spent in the Philippines.

DE VALERA FACES NEW ALLEGATION

"Rejected Ottawa Pact With Britain."

FULL STATE ELECTIONS TO-MORROW.

Dublin, To-day.

The allegation that President Eamon De Valera has rejected the settlement with Britain reached at the Ottawa Conference, has been made by Mr. Devitt, one of the Cosgrave Nationalist candidates for the forthcoming Irish general election.

During a stirring speech at Month, Mr. Devitt stated that Mr. De Valera was concealing the settlement. He is afraid of men with guns," the speaker said.

"The Irish delegates brought with them from Ottawa, a draft settlement with the British representatives, which Mr. De Valera turned down," Mr. Devitt charged.

Both Parties Confident. Campaigning is at fever pitch to-day, the eve of the general election. Tomorrow the 240 candidates will contest the 152 seats on the Irish Dail.

While Mr. Cosgrave's bid to capture the farmers' votes by certain remittances of the land annuities is expected to sway the voting in favour of the Nationalist Party, Mr. Eamon De Valera is equally certain that his party will maintain power.

He expects that 80 Fianna Fail candidates out of 98 will be returned.

The position of the parties at the dissolution was: Fianna Fail, 70; Labour, 7; total De Valera vote 77; Cumann Na Ngaeheal, 64; Independents, 11; farmers, 4; Independent Labour, 2; total Cosgrave, 71. Four seats were vacant pending bye-elections.

Dublin, To-day.

MENU SUGGESTIONS FOR TO-MORROW.

The Dinner Menu
Roast Fresh Ham Baked Potatoes
Baked Apples
Corn Muffins Butter
Cabbage Salad
Sliced Pineapple Date Cookies
Coffee
Roast Fresh Ham
(Minus water or lid)
5 pound fresh ham
1/3 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup dark brown sugar
16 whole cloves

Scrub ham. Place on rack, rind side up, in baking pan. Bake 15 minutes in hot oven. This sears the meat, thereby having it retain its juices. Sprinkle with pepper and salt. Lower fire and bake 2 1/2 hours. Sprinkle sugar on top, insert cloves and bake 10 minutes.

The ham cooks in its own juices and has a delicious flavour. The baking must be closely watched and the meat turned several times to allow even cooking.

Baked Apples.
6 large firm apples
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1/2 cup dates
1 cup water

Wash and core apples. Fit into small baking pan. Stuff cavities with sugar, spices and dates. Add water and bake 35 minutes in moderate oven. Bake frequently.

Corn Muffins (12)

1 1/2 cups flour
1 cup corn meal
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
5 teaspoons baking powder
2 eggs

1-1/3 cups milk
3 tablespoons fat, melted
Mix ingredients and beat three minutes. Half fill greased muffin pans and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. Serve warm.

Date Cookies.

1 cup fat
2 cups sugar
3 eggs
4 tablespoons cream
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped dates
3 1/2 cups flour

Fashionable Colour Combinations Revival Of Victorian Schemes.

BRACELET CUFFS.

Being in the fashion can sometimes be reduced to arithmetic—the really simple kind of addition and subtraction. That elusive thing "chic" is largely composed of details or esthetics—too many of them and one's appearance is fussy—too few and one has the feeling of severity. A woman has to add or subtract to be right. Sometimes, indeed, she has to subtract all before she can start to add but that rarely happens when intelligence has guided the selection of the suit or dress which forms the basis of the ensemble.

It may be that the suit is smartly cut, but its colour is too sober for one's happier moods. It is then a pleasantly easy task letting the detail of a scarf or handbag bring liveliness. Gay headgear we have been permitted for weeks past. Scarves can be positively startling in the number of colours they introduce—chiefly in the form of bold stripes. Fur coats, which in London are coming well into the picture now that the cold days are back again, have bright coloured linings. This is a cheerful mode, but not one that can be followed without a fairly extensive wardrobe. A bright, striking lining might so easily clash with one's frocks. Another idea which is really more practical is to introduce a border of striped ribbon on to the lining where it meets the facing of the coat. The stripes can be selected with the prevailing colours of one's wardrobe in mind and allied to a neutral lining give a colour accent that does not limit.

Victorian Revivals

Navy and red is an honourable alliance noticed in many of the mid-season's collections, and is good for both town and country.

Last winter, we were all kept in such dark clothes for the street. White on black was about our only relief.

The magpie touch is still smart—in fact I award the position of first favourite to ermine and black velvet to the dressy mode for winter days and nights—but there are sure pointers of other colour combinations.

Many of them have been long forgotten, but are amazingly effective for all that. Green and purple—the shades of English violets and their leaves—are lovely together, and an even more startling one is rust and turquoise. A most becoming late afternoon frock—the kind that can be worn to a cinema and a restaurant dinner—was in rust coloured face cloth very fine, with deep turn back cuffs and a cowl like cape of turquoise velvet of the two shades.

Trimmings as well as colours have a Victorian air about them. Heavy gimpure laces make neck trimmings, fur adorns hats, fringe on tunic dresses, sequined capelets are worn—all these are Victorian revivals.

Victorian too is the narrow belt of plaited braid fastened by plaited braid frogs.

Crocheted gloves in black or white thread for the evening recall the mittens of our grandmothers.

More News About Gloves

The glove mode is important in both London and Paris. At Longchamp many had quilted or contrasting stitchery. Velvet is allied to soft suede for evening wear, and although the heavier mode prevails for the day, chiffon or lace are seen at the cocktail hour—for outdoor wear they are hidden under the fur or feather muff which seems inevitable in Paris just now. The heavier daytime glove usually means gauntlet, the cuff of which is cut both long and wide. Over them are worn bracelets in silver, about two inches wide, forming an excellent way of keeping the gauntlet in place. The effect is novel the wide bracelets look like manacles.

Jewellery Modes

Rhinestones imitate more precious stones and are worked into handsome bracelets, pendants and ear-rings. Bracelets are definitely worth attention. A new notion is to wear two coloured bracelets as cuffs on a plain woollen frock with buttons and buckle on belt to match.

A copper tinted metal is becoming more popular than the chromium we have had around us for so long. Rose gold is the shade name given to it, although to my mind it is not pink enough to justify it. It is made into bracelets, buttons and clasps, and put with woollen frocks and as trimmings to berets and small hats. Sometimes they smartly proclaim the owner's monogram.

The Newest Detail

The very latest news from Paris contains another revival—fans are reappearing at smart first nights. They are of velvet, and often match bracelets made of velvet.

Women who have pretty necks score heavily this season, for practically all the clothes of the moment show off the neck and throat.

For the morning frock there is the plain collar of linen or pique in a shape copied from the starched collars worn by nuns—except that it is fastened on the shoulder with attractive buttons of metal or wood. Sometimes the collar is very stiffly starched; sometimes it is merely

DIAMONDS ADORN HAIR.

"Something in the hair," is another novelty this season. One smart young Parisian wears two little diamond stars clipped in the coiffure just over her ears.

Another adorns her closely dressed blonde waves with a wreath of velvet leaves to match her gown, and another wears a wreath made of hair flowers.

Fabric flowers are one of the most telling accents of the winter evening mode. Generally made of velvet in a colour darker or more brilliant than the gown, they trail across the front of a corsage, over a shoulder or about the neck of a little cape to add colour and distinction.

Ironed to make it look glossy.

Many blouses have high square necks which just show the base of the throat. A pretty afternoon bodice has a shallow oval neckline, untrimmed save for a slender scarf that is drawn through slots on the shoulders and tied at the back. Another scarf is made of silk in neck-lace shape, and hung over the front of a bodice that has a small pointed neckline.

Coats are made with shaped cape collars, cut on slanting lines and fastening on the shoulder, which leave the throat without covering.

The bare throat fashion is specially marked just now, because beads and other neck ornaments are "out"—with the exception of a few very original metal and wood necklets worn with sports clothes.

COLD meat and fowl become really appetising with a little

NOVELIST TURNS REVIEWER

Observations Of E. F. Benson
In "As We Are"

WAR-TIME IMMORALITY

Mr. E. F. Benson has already reviewed us "As We Were" in early Victorian times, and now he continues his quest with "As We Are" in an interesting volume published by Messrs. Longmans, Green. He calls it a modern revue, and though there is a considerable element of fiction in the narrative he evades the restrictions of the novel. His chapters are not without sequence and coherence, but the scenes and characters are typical rather than particular.

In the first place we are introduced to the country house of an earl, and its pictures, seen by Mr. Benson as something like geological strata, indicate certain planes of phases of taste; Bellini, Botticelli, Titian are succeeded by such a hotch-potch as Leighton, Rossetti, Edwin Long. But on the whole the tradition of stulteness is maintained, though frolicsome young visitors are disposed to pinch the footman's calves as he hands them a dish or to throw peaches at the egregious Grand Duke. Mr. Benson treats with a gentle irony the pre-war complacency and its rufings; he is very successful, too, in the suggestions of aggressive liberalism. The Earl's son introduces to the house party a young Fellow of Magdalene: "They called him 'Tickets,' and he explained with some pride to Lady Buryan that this was a nickname given him because his father had been a ticket-collector at Cambridge Station. Henry protested: 'Do shut up, Tickets,' he said. 'You are such a frightful snob about your family.' And there is the young duke called Tinny to distinguish him from the Iron Duke. It is amusing, a little heightened from reality perhaps, a little in the spirit of the gallant French aristocrats making fun of the guillotine. To the Earl and Countess "it was as if a picnic party of boys and girls had invaded a Druidical temple."

Highly Coloured Picture. Mr. Benson's chapter about the reckless young people of the war-time is a highly coloured picture of the new immorality. With the advent of lipstick and the rest there is an appreciable tendency to pleasantly arranged divorce and sexual promiscuity, writes Allan Monkhouse in the "Manchester Guardian." He does not fall in sympathy with those who "went through it," and there is intelligent commentary, social and political reflections on the Fool's Paradise that followed the war.

The war is over, the war is a bore, and we are the Bright Young People; such is the note. Naturally, Mr. Benson writes rather of London than of England. Perhaps some of these people of charming manners and advanced views approach caricature. The hectic Londoners, with their frantic attempts to escape boredom, may be of the stock of the traditional families, but their problem is a different one. Whichever way we look it seems that this is a doomed society; if this is the English aristocracy it is time for it to go. Perhaps there is something of the wider view in "Only those of middle age count who, though they may not be able to initiate any longer, taste promise in the new wine of life, though they may personally prefer the old." This is pathetic.

Novellists as Reviewers. The "Grub Street" that Mr. Benson writes about is the upper end of it. He gives the points of view of Mr. Woolf and Mr. Joyce, and suggests that Henry James, preceded by Richardson and Gautier, had been working for forty years on the "stream of consciousness" method before it became a modern fashion. There are some sensible words on

MEN WHO DEPLORED PRINTED BOOKS.

Ruskin's Peculiar Parallel.

"Did people cry out against printing as mechanised literature as they describe broadcasting as mechanised music?" asks Sir Walford Davies.

Yes; they did. One of them was the Duke of Urbino, who said he "would be ashamed to possess a printed book;" he kept some forty scribes copying upon parchment. A distant echo of him will be found in "Saint Joan," where the nobleman deplores that "nowadays, instead of looking at books, people read them."

Ruskin got nearer to the parallel when he deplored printed books (which he classed with gunpowder as one of "the age") on the ground that they "made people use to having everything the same shape."

NEGATIVE TROUBLES.

The negative has its difficulties; but it is not often that it presents such a tangle as is found in an American paper.

The sentence is from a letter written by an official of West Virginia: "None of my employees are not only not related to me but are not related to each other."

erotic fiction, a serious passage on D. H. Lawrence, something on Lytton Strachey, a discussion on bigness versus length in novel writing. Mr. Benson does not like novelists to review novels, and cites Arnold Bennett as a pontifical and inferior judge of his contemporaries. I think he is wrong; that to abolish the novelist-reviewer would involve a considerable deterioration in the quality of reviews, and that Arnold Bennett, if not a great critic, was a shrewd and sincere one. Mr. Benson treats the Book Society to some well-deserved sarcasms.

The final "stocktaking" is far from a cheerful one. He seems to have some dim hope of advance in psychological investigation, but he is worried by signs of physical and moral deterioration and such trifles as the supremacy of the American golfers; can it be possible that he thinks Mr. Bradman greater than W. G. Grace? His conclusion is a rhetorical indictment of all recent Governments up to the National Coalition, which, we are to understand, leaves us just a chance.

Book Reviews

"Bowsprit Ashore." By Alexander Bone. Illustrated by Fread Bone. Foreword by H. M. Tomlinson. (Jonathan Cape. 7s. 6d. net.)

It is a vanished world with which Mr. Bone's memories are mostly concerned, yet for all that surprisingly near in point of time. Those who can write of it from first-hand knowledge, as Mr. H. M. Tomlinson remarks in the charming preface which he contributes to the present volume, "do not yet dodder." The recollections Mr. Bone has here set down in forthright and unsensational fashion are of the ships whose bowsprits—usually terminating in the shark's tail they bore partly for luck and partly to indicate a real "Soul Spainer"—were, no more than a score of years since, still literally outstanding features of the wharveside scene in most of the seaports of the world. He recalls also the race which vanished with the ships upon which they lavished their skill, their labour, and their devotion—the skippers and their wives, "Chips," "Sails," and Bosun, and the old hardcase A.B.s who regarded steamboats and steamboatsmen with an immense disdain right to the end of the chapter. He writes about their traditional superstitions, the recreations of their scanty leisure, their pets, their pubs. The modern seaman, he tells us, takes his ease no longer at his inn, but at a whist drive. Doubtless it is a great deal better for his soul and his pocket that it should be so. Yet there is a certain unregenerate glamour, at all events in retrospect, about those dingy Sallortown bars and saloons with the picturesque names—"Hell's Kitchen," the "Hole in the Wall," the "Liverpool Ship," and the rest of them—by which the old-time seafarer was wont to steer his devious course ashore.

The book is one full of the smells and sounds of the sea and of remote harbours, of the tang of salt and tar and old junk and lumber and nitrate. Nor should rum be omitted from the list, for Mr. Bone's concluding chapters describe the episode in his career which brought him into fairly intimate association with that lawless fluid. But smuggling, robbed of the glamour which distance lends, is a sordid, material sort of business. Rum Row as Mr. Bone writes of it no exception to the rule.

Miss Freda Bone enlivens the pages with pleasant wood engravings, some of which, however, seem to belong rather to the "Treasure Island" period of sea history than to the late nineteenth century of the letterpress.

"The Punjab of To-day." Vol. II. By Hugh Kennedy Trevaskis—(Civil and Military Gazette Lahore.)

Mr. Trevaskis continues his economic survey of the Punjab of to-day with the same painstaking care that he paid to his earlier volume. The author refers at length to various latter-day problems and ends with some pertinent comments on the future not only of the Province but of India as a whole. "Of old, seniority ruled," he says, "and though some dunder-heads got more than they deserved, it was a cheap price to pay for freedom from the cares of intrigue. Under Indianisation most of the best jobs must go to the Indians. . . . The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, but to the man who makes fewest mistakes, and who knows to profit by the mistakes of his rivals."

While some of his conclusions will be hotly challenged, Mr. Trevaskis has the satisfaction of knowing that he has expressed what he had to say without fear or malice.

"Treehaven." By Kathleen Norris. (John Murray. 7s. 6d.)

Once again Mrs. Norris successfully exploits her favourite theme, that of pleasant family life in California. Her four graceful sisters are as attractive as any characters she has so far created and Cynthia, the dark sister, is drawn with something more than her ordinary skill. One feels that the writer must have been brought up in companionship with the Louisa M. Alcott novels and that this latest book is a new and quite modern version of "Little Women."

"Cornish Interlude." By Sinclair Murray. (John Murray. 7s. 6d.)

A beautiful singer mysteriously in hiding. A man living in the shadow of some past disaster. The meeting of the two in the sunny seclusion of a Cornish cove is the beginning of a pretty romance which culminates in a murder trial with a happy ending.

THEFT OF FAMOUS MANUSCRIPT.

"The theft of the second volume of the 'Manuscript of Guy Mannerling' is one of those crimes that seem to be without reason," writes "Observer." The pages are valueless except to a collector, and a collector dare not buy unless he intends to bury the loot in a cellar.

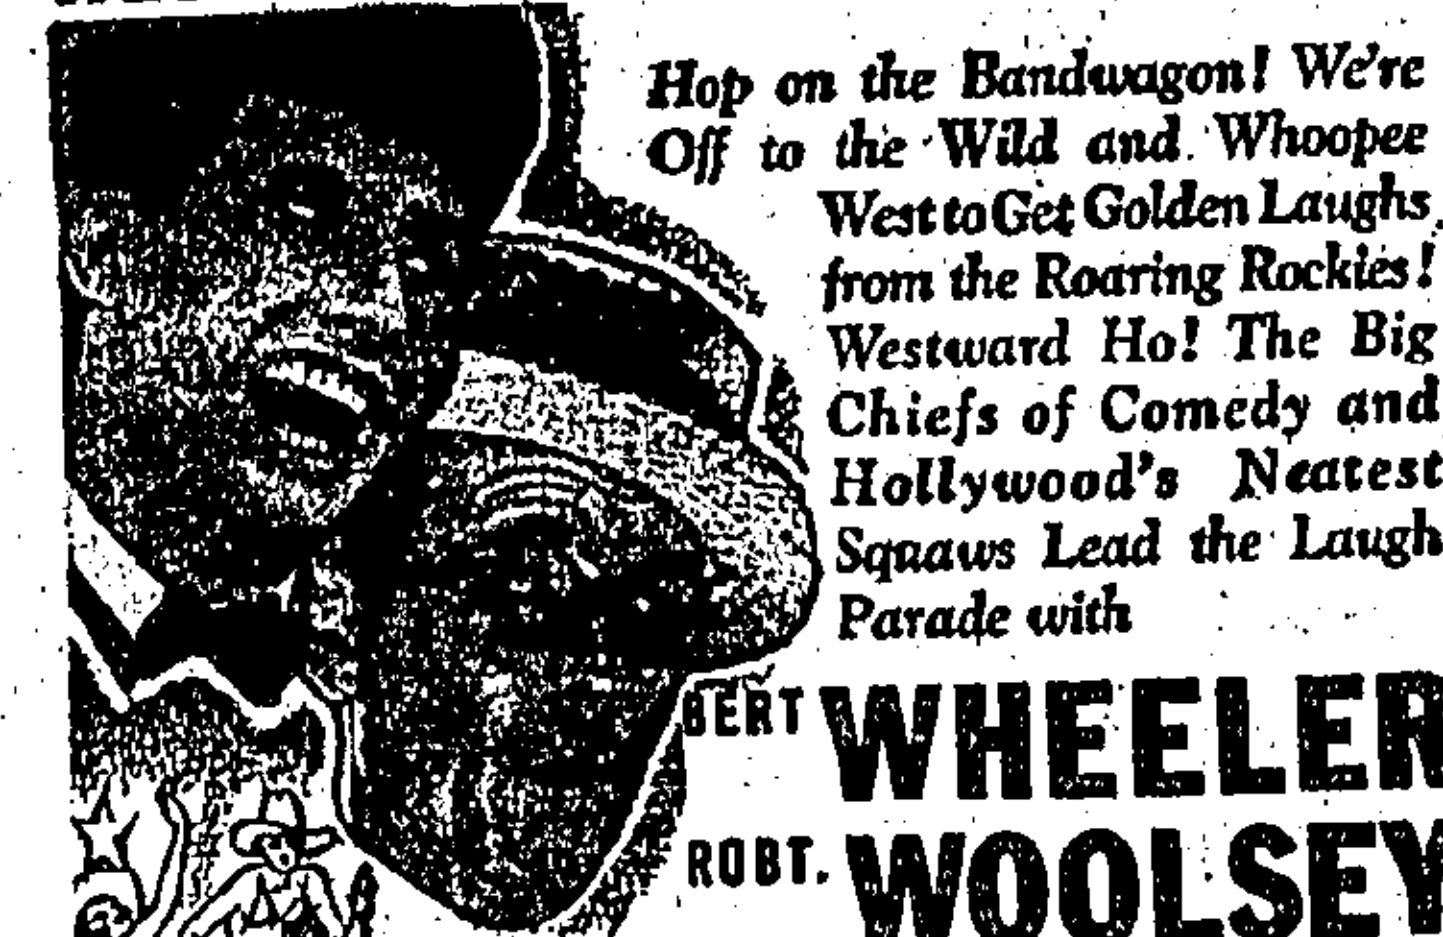

Is there really a secret market of this sort? We heard the other day of a Morley madrigal which is only now available because the only copy was in the safe of an American "collector" who refused access to it; and it may be that there are others whose conception of connoisseurship is just to play the dog in the manger.

HONG KONG NATURALIST.

Informative Issue Published.

The combined issues of Nos. 3 and 4 of volume 3 of the "Hong Kong Naturalist" just published, have been produced under the editorship of Dr. G. A. C. Merklots, Ph. D., M. Sc., F. L. S., Biologist at the University. The price of the book is $4.

Father D. J. Finn, the local anthropologist, contributes an article on ancient pottery, in which he deals with the subject in fascinating manner. Traces of pottery which have been found on Lamma Island are also dealt with and are well illustrated. Dr. R. B. Jackson writes on mosquitoes, an article that is instructive and should appeal to the layman and scientist alike.

Dr. Herklots is responsible for an article on local birds, while Dr. F. A. McClure deals with the narcissus, the sacred lily of the Chinese, which is much in evidence at the Chinese New Year.

Articles on the anatomy of spiders and on fishes of China, complete a most informative issue.

SHANGHAI SOCCER XI ARRIVES.

TURNER'S INCLUSION.

Turner, of the Police who is vice-captain of the side, was included in the Shanghai team under peculiar circumstances. Playing as inside left for the majority of the Shanghai soccer season, Turner was moved to left full back where his instant success was so marked that he was played there permanently. His displays in that position in the Skottowe Cup competition earned him the distinction of being invited to play in the Interport and to act as vice-captain.

Voong, the Tung Hwa left full back, will fill this position in Hong Kong when he will partner Turner. He was included in the team for his wonderful displays both in the Skottowe Cup and in the Interport Trials. His sense of anticipation is said to be uncanny, while his clearances are always well-timed. This will be his first Interport.

Remedios is well known in Hong Kong, having previously represented the Colony against Shanghai, while Vance of the R. A. S. C. was reserve against Hong Kong last November.

Both Collet and Bossuet, of the A. S. F. (French Club), are new importers and are thoroughly worthy of their places, the latter being an excellent forward with wonderful ball control and a drive with sting behind it.

The Shanghai skipper said that the selectors had delayed their final selection so long that the team had not yet played one game together, and were all looking forward to a loosening-up this afternoon.

Mr. J. Watson, the Shanghai manager, in an interview with the China Mail stated that he was fairly confident of victory, though both he and the team realised the formidable task ahead of them.

He was sure that Shanghai would give Hong Kong the fight of their lives, and, providing the team play well together, they should encounter little difficulty in taking the Cup back to Shanghai. "The trip to Hong Kong was a very fine one, and all the men are bubbling over with vigour," said Mr. Watson.

Commenting on the team, Mr. Watson said that the strength lay in the defence although the forwards were very reliable.

Bradley who was included at the last minute is one of the finest goal-keepers seen in Shanghai for some years, and an excellent understudy to Chow. The last three games the Police played in prior to the team leaving Shanghai were memorable for the displays given by Bradley between the sticks.

"The forward line possesses both speed and ball control and if they combine effectively they should give Hong Kong a very anxious time."

"The defence is the strength of the team and has experience behind it. In Stanley Gash they have the ideal leader and, providing they play up to him, they will place the team on the road to victory."

Asked how the team compared with the November side, Mr. Watson said that the present team were very much better than the other, the players having far more experience of big football. The team and reserves will turn out for their first practice on the Club ground this afternoon at 3.30 p.m.

THE HEIGHT OF ROMANCE.

A giant's wedding has been recently celebrated at Hamburg. The bridegroom was 7 feet 3 1/4 inches tall, and the bride 7 feet 1 3/4 inches.
The couple, who came from a local circus, were followed to the altar by three pairs of dwarfs. After the ceremony, the party returned to the circus.—Reuter.

HEALTHY TOBACCO INDUSTRY.

Carreras Make £750,000 Profit.

Satisfaction will be felt by the shareholders of Carreras, Ltd., at the results announced for the year to Oct. 31 last. Profits increased from £736,192 to £750,659, and in addition to maintaining the dividends at the same rate as previously, £27,223 is added to the reserve fund, making it the round million. In view of the widespread talk of the costly 'tobacco war' in progress, these results would appear to indicate a very healthy condition in the industry.

Reference was made to the alleged "tobacco war" by Mr. Arthur Phillips at the meeting at which the shareholders of Godfrey Phillips, Ltd., approved the increase in the capital to £2,000,000. There were no signs of such a war, he declared, adding, "All that is happening is that manufacturers in Great Britain have set out to prevent a fall in consumption by turning their big guns to greater publicity for the brands consumed by the masses, which I regard as a quite satisfactory development of legitimate competition."

REVOLT PLANNED IN PRAGUE.

Nine Youths Gaoled For Complicity.

(Reuter's Special Service.)
Prague, Saturday.
Sentences varying from five months to fourteen days' imprisonment were imposed on nine youths who were found guilty of complicity in a movement that aimed at the separation of Slovakia from Czechoslovakia.

Prosecuting the State Attorney urged leniency on the ground that the youths could never have secured the numbers or equipment necessary for a successful revolution, although their work was against the safety of the security of the Republic.

"M.P. for the North Pole."

Among the spectators in the Distinguished Strangers' Gallery of the House of Commons recently was the Hon. George Black, Speaker of the Canadian Dominion Parliament. Mr. Black has had a romantic career. He was in the Gold Rush of '98, and when representing Yukon, the most northerly constituency, was known as M.P. for the North Pole.

Though over 50 when war broke out, he organised the Yukon Machine Gun Unit and saw service. He is a man of the open spaces, good humoured, and direct of speech.

Revolution Heroes on Stamps.

The first issues of Republican postage stamps are now being made by the Spanish Government. Hitherto the new regime has been content to use the old Alfonso issues, surcharged with the words "Spanish Republic."

The new stamps commemorate the dead revolutionaries of Spain. A blue 40 centimos issue is engraved with the portrait of Emilio Castelar y Ripoll, the Republican philosopher and politician who was one of the heroes of the 1868 Revolution, and died in 1899. And a 30 centimos stamp, appropriately coloured red, is dedicated to the memory of Pablo Iglesias, the founder of modern Spanish Socialism, who died a few years ago.

"Some actresses are just the same off the stage as they are on," says a gossip writer. It's a wonder they don't catch cold!

Believe It Or Not—
Many a man shows his worst side to his better half.

NECKS, PLEASE.

Muffling up the throat with fur is merely a matter of habit says a doctor. And often a matter of rabbit.

A Safe Bet.

If a woman assures her thumb for a thousand pounds you can bet it's the one she keeps her husband under.

THE REASON.

A doctor states that it is far safer for a man to kiss a dog than to kiss a girl. A dog, of course, can't possibly persuade a man to marry it.

Facts You Did Not Know.

A scientist at the Field Museum of Natural History has found that poison ivy is more dangerous in the spring, when the leaves are expanding and the poisonous sap is rising, than at other times.

English agricultural implement builders have developed a Diesel motored machine to pulverize and aerate the soil through the operation of two rotating steel rings to which are attached 12 plow arms.

By studying the form and size of tree rings, which were influenced by the weather centuries ago, a New Mexico scientist has decided that the ancient pueblo dwellings were erected about 730 years ago.

Carried by a motor truck, a telescoping tower that can be elevated to a height of 30 feet by a hydraulic jack has been placed in service at Milan, Italy, for repairing electric power lines and street lights.

News In Brief.

The Right Rev. Bishop of Victoria will distribute the prizes at the annual ceremony to be held at St. Paul's College on Tuesday next, at 8 p.m. The Hon. Dr. S. W. T'so will take the chair. A concert will follow the prize-giving.

CONCESSION TO STUDENTS.

All foreign students who have been duly registered in an Italian University will be allowed a reduction of 50 per cent. on the ordinary railway fees.

In order that those who are concerned may avail themselves of the reduction, application should be made to the Italian Consulate at Kowloon Building, Queen's Road Central.

SHOCKING PRISON REVELATIONS

HARSH TREATMENT IN SOUTHERN STATES

"RENTING" CONVICTS

Shocking conditions have recently been revealed in a number of Southern States as to the ill-treatment of negro and white prisoners and conditions of virtual peonage, writes the New York correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

The precipitating incident was the murder of Arthur Maillefert, a young white man, who was killed in prison at Jacksonville, Florida. Maillefert was punished for attempted escape by being strung up in a small wooden structure, like a coffin stood on end, beneath the burning tropical sun until he died of exhaustion.

The guard who thus punished him has just been sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary, the maximum sentence possible under the law, but no informed person supposes that the system of similar punishments for refractory prisoners has been ended, or is likely to be ended, until a public opinion has been created throughout the South which is hostile to it. For complicated reasons, growing primarily out of the conflict between the whites and negroes, that public opinion at present hardly exists.

Cruel System.

The worst aspect of the convict system in the South is perhaps the renting out of prisoners to private contractors, who use them to work on roads or as labourers on cotton plantations, in sawmills, and so on. Many of these contractors are cruel and brutal men, who rule strictly by use of legions, revolvers, and the whip. There are well-authenticated cases where they have beaten men to death for refusing to work or attempting to escape, and even in a few instances because of "malingering" when in fact the man was too ill to work.

It has often been pointed out that the condition of these convicts (of whom most, but not all, are negroes) is worse than was that of the black slaves before the Emancipation Proclamation of 1863, for the slave-owner had an investment of a thousand dollars or so in his human property, and it was to his interest to keep the slaves healthy and even to a certain extent contented, while the contractor who hires prison labourers can make more money by working his men to exhaustion, or even to the point of death, and then replacing them with others.

Debt Slaves.

Equally important is the common practice among plantation owners of obtaining labourers by paying the fines of negroes arrested for some trifling offence, and then letting these men "work out the amount of money which has been paid on their behalf. Such employers often juggle their books so that no matter how long and hard the negro works he never gets out of debt, and while this is the case he is a prisoner on the plantation.

It is often the case that he has been given a suspended sentence to prison by the Court, which is in a conspiracy with the planter, and if he were to flee would be picked up and put into gaol. But even if this is not so, his chance of getting away is slight; for the plantations are patrolled day and night by armed white men on horseback, and bloodhounds are used, just as they were seventy years ago, to find anyone who has run away.

When labour is scarce it is not at all unusual for the white sheriff to arrest a number of negroes who have been guilty of no crime whatever. Then, by prearrangement, they are given their choice of six months or a year in gaol or some trumped up charge or going to work for some near-by cotton planter for $3 a month—a sum which is never adequate to cover the negro's needs for clothing, tobacco, medical supplies, etc., purchased at high prices in the plantation store owned by the planter.

Frightful Conditions.

These conditions, often exposed in the past, have just been described again in a striking book, Georgia Nigger, by John L. Spivak, an experienced and reputable journalist and a former member of the staff of the New York World. Mr. Spivak, whose statements are corroborated by numerous other witnesses and are accompanied by documentary and photographic proof, describes the hardships which even under the best circumstances are endured by the convicts. These men travel to and fro in a huge cage on wheels like that in which wild animals are exhibited in a zoo. They work in a group, chained together so that all must move in unison, and an untoward gesture by one individual may cause agony to his neighbours. They are given the coarsest food, filthily prepared and served. Their sanitary arrangements are primitive in the extreme, they are rarely permitted to bathe—a real hardship in a semi-tropical area—nor are they given clean clothing except at infrequent intervals.

When one of the guards (usually a half-literate, badly underpaid representative of the "poor white trash" of the South) decides that one of his charges needs punishment, this is meted out in a sadistic fashion. Men are beaten or whipped; they are trussed up like fowls and flung down to lie for hours in the burning sun; they are hung up by the wrists; and so on.

The "sweet-box" which caused the death of Arthur Maillefert is in common use throughout the South, though usually the victim is taken out before death has put an end to his suffering. The methods of punishment used on the plantations where negro labourers are working out their debts are not dissimilar. The chief difference is that when a man is a convict and is killed it is reported that he was "trying to escape," while a man killed on a plantation simply disappears or else his body is found and the (white) coroner's jury brings in a verdict of death from cause unknown.

FIGHTING SMUGGLERS IN U.S.A.

Opium Menace From Eastern Ports.

MACAO DRUG RUNNER CONFISCATED.

Washington.

A matter-of-fact little publication of the U.S. Treasury Department describes the finding of hundreds of contraband packages of narcotics hidden in outlandish places on glamorous ships from foreign ports.

It told of government agents in dark city streets facing desperate "peddlers" under the threatening muzzle of a machine gun, of a luxurious opium den in a New York apartment.

Seventy-three ounces of morphine were carried off a Japanese ship at Seattle in the cotton quilted jacket of a dapper quarter-master and into the arms of vigilant officers.

Forty-seven tins of heroin were discovered in 12 innocent-looking barrels of olive oil on a Greek boat docked at Brooklyn.

In this everlasting guessing game, the U.S. officials discovered dope in such unlikely-seeming places as a hollow mast, under the floor of a pantry locker, in a pillow slip and a laundry bag, egg crates in the steward's box, behind the paneling of a stateroom, in coal bunkers under a mountain of fuel.

Machine Gun Menace.
From the Far East through Pacific ports comes most of the smoking opium in characteristic packages bearing the imprint of a rooster, a picture of a fat little man on a queer, horned animal, and numerous Chinese characters.

But Turkey, the Government reported, seems to have replaced France as the principal source of narcotics the bulk of which enter through New York.

One agent in New York contracted to buy 75 ounces of morphine from two men for $700.

"In order to receive delivery," said the report, "the officer and an employee were compelled to ride in an automobile with one drug merchant to a dark street, followed by another car in which the other dealer and two of his associates were riding."

"Both cars stopped, and while the actual delivery to the officer was being made, the second car backed against a wall and covered the agent and employee with a machine gun to guard against possible arrest."

Sequel to this is a sentence a little further on recording that these two other "peddlers" were arrested shortly after.

"Marabellia" Caught.
With evident relief, the Federal authorities reported that the career of the schooner Marabellia now seems definitely an end, thanks to the co-operation of the Chinese, Canadian, Panamanian and Mexican Governments.

Flying the flag of Panama, this audacious craft in the summer of 1931 sailed from China with a big cargo of aliens and opium and despite a careful watch along the Pacific Coast sneaked into a secluded Mexican port and landed its contraband with the aid of aeroplanes.

Aroused at what it described as "one of the largest smuggling operations ever attempted in the United States," the U.S. Government this year succeeded in having the ship confiscated by the Chinese Government, its registry cancelled by Panama and its skipper banished by Hong Kong authorities.—Reuter.

THE HUNG YUEN SCHOOL.

Graduation Function Yesterday.

The graduation function of the Hung Yuen English Shorthand and Typewriting School was held yesterday morning at the Prince's Theatre, Kowloon, and was attended by over six hundred guests including the parents of the students. The prizes and certificates were distributed to the successful candidates by Dr. Y. S. Chung.

In presenting his annual report on the progress of the school, the headmaster, Mr. Liu Hung-yuen, said that of the 63 students who participated in the annual examination, 58 passed in shorthand and typewriting.

SLOW TRAM SERVICE.

[To the Editor, "China Mail."]

Sir,—Now that changes are being made in our transport services, can nothing be done to expedite and modernize our tramway system?

To my own personal knowledge the tramway service is much slower than it was 15 years ago when much of the track was single. In these days of speed, surely this is an outrageous and intolerable position, and one with which this long-suffering community should no longer put up.

Is there any earthly reason why on straight stretches the drivers shouldn't allow the switch to remain on the fully "on" position for at least two consecutive seconds? As it is, they play with the switch, on, off, on, off, on, off, in the most exasperating manner, as if experimenting to see how far the tram could run on its own momentum; the result being that the tram drags along as if pulling behind it the whole weight of a fully loaded goods train.

To me it seems as if the tramway company's only concern is to provide sufficient trams to carry the travelling public, the question of when passengers get to their destinations being considered of no importance whatever. One would think that a speedy service, by pleasing the public, and thus indirectly as well as directly tending to carry more passengers, would be to the company's advantage. Surely it cannot be that the Government has imposed the present ridiculous snail-like rate of progression, a rate which I am confident could quite safely be increased by 50 per cent. if not doubled.

"SLOW COACH."

VICTORIA GAOL ATTACK.

Prisoner Pleads Guilty At Sessions.

SEVERE AXE WOUNDS.

The recent attack with an axe by a long-term prisoner on a short-term prisoner in the painters' shop, Victoria Gaol, early in December, was recalled in the Criminal Sessions this morning, when before Mr. Justice Wood, Tse Kau pleaded guilty to wounding Tam Tak.

His Lordship accepted the plea, but the absence of the prisoner's criminal record from the Court, caused the case to be adjourned to this afternoon.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, for the Crown, said that the injured man and the accused were not friends. They quarrelled, and, according to a statement made by the injured man, there was trouble between the short-term men and the long-term men, there being a differentiation in uniform. The long-term prisoners alleged that the short-term men received certain favours.

On the afternoon of December 7 last, prisoner attacked Tam Tak with an axe. He cut him severely fracturing the bones in both arms, and causing permanent injury and partial disablement. Prisoner was overpowered by a European warder and two British soldiers, Price and Hurns, who are serving terms.

Tse Kau, from the dock, stated he had no intention of maiming Tam Tak, and that the attack was made in the heat of the moment.

Prisoner, who possessed a bad record, was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment.

LACK OF EVIDENCE IN HEROIN CASE.

Constable Discharged.

The case in which Police Constable She Ki-chang, of the Shantung contingent of the Hong Kong Police Force, was charged with the possession of 5,000 heroin pills aboard the s.s. Anhui, was continued before Mr. W. Schofield in the Central Police Court this morning.

Further evidence was taken, at the conclusion of which, the defendant was discharged.

Mr. F. C. E. Rendall appeared for the defence. Defendant was attached to the Anti-Piracy Guard at the time of his arrest.

WEATHER FORECAST.

North winds, fresh and fine, is the weather forecasted in to-day's report issued from the Royal Observatory.

KOWLOON JEWEL ROBBERY.

Big Haul Made From Caravan Shop.

$3,531 LOSS.

Evading two Indian watchmen who were apparently in some other part of the building, thieves entered The Caravan Jewellery and Oriental goods shop, Peninsula Hotel over the week-end, and made a successful haul of jewellery to the value of $3,531.

Police are investigating the affair, but so far no arrest has been effected. It is estimated that about 180 rings, of various designs and settings, comprised the booty.

The Reception clerk at the Peninsula Hotel evidently heard nor saw nothing to arouse his suspicion. The thief or thieves entered quietly by opening one of the shop doors. A duplicate key must have been used.

ROBBERY CASE DELAY.

Prisoner's Clothing Not Produced.

PEAK AMAH ATTACKED.

The absence of clothing which the prisoner was wearing at the time of the assault, caused Mr. Justice Wood in the Criminal Sessions this morning to adjourn to this afternoon a case in which Lam Wing was charged with assault with intent to rob Wong Sin, an amah employed at 31, Lugard Road, The Peak.

Mr. Fraser, for the Crown, said that the woman, employed at 31, Lugard Road, The Peak, was attacked on Hutton Road on December 4, while on her way to Church. She was pushed down a nullah. Nothing was stolen. The accused was arrested the following day, and was pointed out by the woman at an identification parade.

Evidence was taken. Prisoner alleged he was pointed out to her by other witnesses. He further alleged he was severely assaulted before making a confession.

LOCAL ESTATES GRANTED.

$37,000 Left By Godown Employee.

Local estate sworn at $37,000 was left by a godown employee, Chung Shau-foo, alias Chung Yew alias Chung Yew-wa, alias Chung Po-shee, who died in March, 1931, at 22, Wyndham Street, second floor. Letters of administration have been granted to his widow.

To-Day's Short Story.

ACCORDING TO PLAN

By Brandon
Fleming.

MR. CHARLES TROBE was a methodical man. He lived to schedule. He had a departmental mind and a remarkable faculty for confining his mental activity to the particular department in which he required it. That was the secret of his uncanny powers of concentration and ability to keep his fingers on an extraordinary number of threads.

When he had accorded to any subject the exact amount of time and attention he considered it claimed, it was returned to its mental pigeon-hole, and not another thought was given to it until it appeared again on the schedule. He was as neat and orderly inwardly in his mind as he was outwardly in his clothes and audibly in his speech. Therefore, when he made up his mind to kill his partner, George Brinson, the project developed in a perfectly normal manner. He considered it as he considered the ordinary matters arising in the day's business, even allocating a fixed time for its contemplation, and did not think of it at any other.

LESSON SERMON.

First Church of Christ, Scientist—Hong Kong.

"Truth" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 22nd.

The Golden Text was: "I will praise thee, O Lord, among the people: I will sing unto thee among the nations. For thy mercy is great unto the heavens, and thy truth unto the clouds." (Ps. 57: 9, 10).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Then believed on him. If ye continue in said Jesus to those Jews which my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 31, 32).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The best sermon ever preached is Truth" practised and demonstrated by the destruction of sin, sickness and death. . . . Truth makes a new creature, in whom old things pass away and "all things are become new." (p. 201).

POPULAR COLONY WEDDING.

The bride's gift to the groom was a silver cigarette case and cigar box, while the groom's gift to the bride was an enamelled silver dressing set.

Bridegroom's Career.

Mr. William Kay, who was appointed a Senior Master in 1930, was appointed to the Education Department in 1913, arriving in the Colony on September 11 of that year. For three years he was acting Headmaster of the Salyngpung English School.

From May to October, 1918, Mr. Kay was acting Second Master of Queen's College, and in 1926 he was appointed Second Master. In March, 1930, he became acting Headmaster of the Ellis Kadoorie English School.

Mr. Kay is an ardent Scotsman, and at the recent Sir Walter Scott Centenary dinner, he made a brilliant speech.

Sir Robert's Toast.
Speaking at the reception, Sir Robert Ho Tung made a humorous speech when he proposed the health of the happy couple, and recalled the fact that five years ago, Mr. Kay had proposed a similar toast at the wedding of his (Sir Robert's) son.

Sir Robert said that he could claim a long, personal friendship with the bridegroom, and he had received a great deal of intimate knowledge of him through his sons and grandsons who had studied under Mr. Kay at Queen's College.

He concluded with eulogistic references to the happy couple whom he wished health and happiness in their married life.

He could give himself only a week to carry it out. At the beginning of any new enterprise, however large or small, he always set a time limit for its completion, and adhered to it strictly. When he had first entered the business as a clerk he had set himself a definite period for each stage of progress to end in partnership, and had carried out the programme as a train runs to its time-table, arriving punctually at each station en route, without allowing any scruples to stand in his way. He applied the same method to his daily routine inside and outside the office. He was applying it now to the killing of Brinson.

He had arrived at the decision exactly at eleven o'clock on a certain Thursday morning. He had reached his office at the usual time; had disposed of the various early matters that required his attention; at a quarter past ten there had been a talk with Brinson; at ten minutes to eleven he had returned to his private room, sat down at his writing-table, and remained perfectly still, staring fixedly at a dark spot on the panelled wall opposite. As the clock struck eleven he decided to kill Brinson.

The decision had not in any way shocked or alarmed him or stirred him from his customary composure. His reasons for arriving at it were threefold. The first—which had brought things to a head that morning—was that in consequence of the new expansion of business which Brinson had determined upon, the unexpected call on the firm's resources would inevitably expose the careful and clever defalcations in which Mr. Trobe had indulged during the past two years. It would be impossible any longer to conceal them, and he had neither the means nor the inclination to make restitution in time to avoid discovery. He knew that Brinson would show him no mercy. He would, in fact, be glad of an opportunity to get him out and run the business himself. Brinson was no more scrupulous than Trobe. They were, indeed, both rogues together. But Brinson had managed to keep inside the law, and Trobe had gone outside. That was the only difference between them.

TO-MORROW'S STORY.

To-morrow's story will be "The Little Man," by Hal Pink.

The second reason was that he was in urgent need of an increased income, which Brinson's departure from the business and the world would enable him to secure. The third reason was that he was in love with Brinson's wife. And Brinson's wife was in love with him.

The murder of Brinson therefore became, on account of the first reason, a necessity; and on account of the other two, a thing greatly to be desired.

During the next three days he had devoted a specified period to the question of Brinson's death. He possessed the power to visualise a plan as it developed in his mind, to review and criticise. He did this to his plan for the murder of Brinson. Brinson died in his mind a hundred times; and each time a little alteration, a small improvement crept into the scheme. On the fifth day it was complete. On the sixth day it was to be put into execution.

The sixth day was a Wednesday. He had selected it because he knew just what was happening in the Brinson household. Mrs. Brinson was staying with friends in the country for a week. Two of the four servants were away on their holiday. On Wednesday the remaining two would have their evening out together, and Brinson would be alone in the house after dinner until eleven o'clock. There would be plenty of time. For exactly an hour on the Wednesday morning he took the whole plan out of its niche in his brain, went over it carefully, and put it back again.

Just as he was turning to something else, Brinson came into the room.

His sudden appearance at that moment did not disturb Mr. Trobe in the least. He nodded pleasantly.

Final Interport Trial The Best Snippets From The Game

(By Outside Left).

The final interport trial between the selected eleven and the South China (representing the Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation) took place on Saturday and resulted in a win for the former by 4 goals to 1.

The trial was the best of the series and was an excellent conclusion to a series of haphazard trial arranged by the Interport Selection Committee.

As I pointed out in these columns last Thursday the playing of Podmore at forward and C. Pile on the left wing was one of the biggest blunders the selectors had made since the trials commenced.

Both these men were definite failures in their respective positions. C. Pile being unable to use his left foot to advantage, while Podmore was badly out of position, and was, for the major half of the game, keeping company with his halves.

Tang Kwong Sum, who gave a disappointing display in his first trial, played a splendid game on Saturday and almost deserved the right wing position in the Interport side.

The Gosano brothers worked well together, although B. Gosano had an off day, his passing being very weak at times. He, however, combined very effectively with his right winger.

The outstanding player on the field was undoubtedly Leung Wing-chui, whose tackling and all round play was excellent. His feeding of the forwards was a feature of his play, while his covering of Allan in defence was most laudable.

The other halves Pardoe and A. Durcan also played well and deserve places in the interport team. Pardoe played his usual game and used his head to advantage, while Durcan played a fine bustling game that revealed only one fault, that of trying to dribble too much, which is now becoming with him a characteristic of his play.

The two backs on Saturday, Allan and Lau Mau played well together, especially the latter whose well-timed clearances, both with his head and feet saved his charge from many dangerous raids.

Allen, however, played a sterling game and was responsible for the breaking up of the Chinese attack in the latter part of the first half when the Chinese were continually on the attack.

Rodger in goal was perfectly safe, and could not be blamed for the shot that evaded him. His place in the interport team was a certainty even before Saturday's display.

The Chinese team pitted against the selected eleven was not the best the Federation could have fielded.

Tam Kong Park, the brilliant South China inside right, was unable to play, and Fung King Cheong and Ip Pak Wa both of whom were selected to play unaccountably failed to make an appearance their places being filled by two of South China's second eleven men.

Gold medals were presented to the St. Joseph's team, winners of the 5-A-Side competition, and silver medals to the Borderers' five, who were runners-up. Mrs. T. A. Mitchell made the presentation.

CLUB HOCKEY TEAM.

The following will represent the Hong Kong Hockey Club in XI against the Army on Wednesday at the United Services R.C. ground at 5 p.m.:—H. W. Lee; J. Rodger; E. Y. Rodd; W. A. Reed; H. J. D. Love; J. B. Noronha; H. Owen; Hughes; W. E. Williams; G. E. H. Divett (Capt.); C. C. Francis; A. T. Lay.

The Selected eleven had the better of the exchanges throughout the game, although they were weak on the left wing.

A. V. Gosano was the best forward and very unselfish. On numerous occasions when he could have taken the ball into the goal-mouth and scored, he passed to his inside men who failed.

He scored two of the four goals for the selected team.

Podmore, who was out of position, played a bustling game in the second half when he netted an excellent goal, beating Lam Tin Chan all the way.

The selected team's first goal was scored by Tang Kwong-sum. Cheng Shui-hong, who played in the last interport against Shanghai, was responsible for the Federation's only goal, the result of a brilliant opportunism.

WALES BEAT ENGLAND BY 7 TO 3

Boon Scores All The Welsh Points.

HONG KONG BOY PLAYING?

London, Saturday.

A crowd of 60,000 saw Wales beat England by a dropped goal and a try (7 pts.) to a try (3 pts.) for the first time in the history of the series of encounters at Twickenham.

Though England led at the interval by an unconverted try scored by W. Elliot, the United Services stand off half, Wales fully deserved their triumph.

The Welsh forwards played magnificently, especially the wingers who completely upset the plans of the English backs.

R. Boon, the Cardiff wing-three-quarter dropped a glorious goal in the second half to give Wales the lead by a point and followed this up with an unconverted try.
H. R. H. the Prince of Wales was present at the match and was presented to the two teams. The weather was fine, though cold.

It is more than probable that R. A. Gerrard (Bath), a former pupil of the Diocesan Boys' School, was playing for England. He was capped last year against South Africa, Wales, Ireland and Scotland, and has figured in two England fifteens in the trial games.

Last Year Scotland were the wooden-spoonists in the International Tournament, England, Wales and Ireland tying for the premier honour. Wales beat England by 12 pts to 6 at Swansea in the first match of the series. In all the games played between the two countries England have won 23, Wales 18, and 4 have been drawn.

SOCCER SELECTORS DO RIGHT THING

BEST POSSIBLE SIDE WITHOUT STRANGE

CHINESE RIGHT WING MENACE

(By Outside Left).

THE INTERPORT SOCCER SELECTION COMMITTEE HAVE ACQUITTED THEMSELVES CREDITABLY. THERE IS ONLY ONE SURPRISE IN THE TEAM THEY SELECTED AFTER SATURDAY'S TRIAL, AND THAT IS THE INCLUSION OF LAU MAU IN PLACE OF S. STRANGE AT LEFT BACK. BUT THAT WAS UNAVOIDABLE AS STRANGE IS NOT CONSIDERED FIT TO PASS THE TEST AFTER THE INJURY HE SUSTAINED IN THE LAST LAI WAH CUP GAME. LAU MAU IS THE BEST UNDERSTUDY THE SELECTORS COULD HAVE CHOSEN.

The inclusion of both Seal as left winger and Wong Mei-shun as inside right came as no surprise to me, for in these columns last Thursday I advocated for the bringing back of Wong Mei-shun to inside right, and the playing of Seal on the left wing, the latter being the finest player in the Colony for that position.

The team as it stands now is, with the exception of S. Strange at left back, the strongest possible side the Colony can field.

B. Gosano is better placed at inside left, the right wing combination of Wong Mei-shun and Cheng Shui-hong is as good as any that can be found in the Colony. I was very pleased to see that Cheng revealed no cause for anxiety regarding his recent injury. I felt almost certain that he would not be fit in time for the game.

HONG KONG.

Rodger (Club):

Allan (R. A.)
Lau Mau (South China) (Vice-Capt.)

Leung Wing Chui (South China)
Pardoe (Artillery) (Capt.)
A. Duncan (Club):

Cheng Shui Hong (South China)
Wong Mei-shun (South China)
A. V. Gosano (St. Joseph's)
B. Gosano (St. Joseph's)
Seal (Artillery).

RESERVES:—Martin (Club), Mullane (Borderers), Bliss (Kowloon), Beltrao (St. Joseph's) and C. Pile (Police).

Martin, the Club back, has been given L. Cpl. Barber's place in the reserves.

The two Chinese representatives played in the same positions in the last Interport against Shanghai last November, and should do well together.

The halves could only be bettered by the inclusion of Podmore instead of A. Duncan, but as the three Services' places have already been filled, it is with regret that Podmore has been left out.

Allan and Lau Mau combined well on Saturday, and it will be revealed that the South China player gave a brilliant display.

RACING

SLOW GALLOPS CLOCKED.

Stickybeak Injured During Week.

NGTUK FOR THE SYDNEY MAIDENS.

(By FALCON.)

(Special to The "China Mail.")

IN reviewing the training performances of last week, one cannot help being struck by the fact that most owners are extremely self-satisfied and that no one is taking a risk with their candidates in order to see what they can do. While it is a good policy not to stretch a horse unduly during training, it is also equally true that an undertrained pony is a pitiable sight. Owners appear afraid to give their ponies any more than half a mile of hard work with the result that times have been very much on the slow side.

In this connection the performances of subscription griffins of this year is very markedly slow. Perhaps there are not many good ponies among this year's lot, but that is no explanation of the fact that with one or two exceptions, so far not a single pony has done a half mile under 1.05 or the last quarter inside 32. A comparison with training times of former years will show that subscription griffins were doing quite convincing track work, a few weeks before the Annual Race Meeting.

A POOR BEST.

The fastest last quarter clocked: of the performances of the subs. last week is 33.1, the performance being that of King Salmon on Wednesday. There seems to be no doubt whatever that the subscription griffins of this season are very much below the ordinary but that is no reason for giving them this ultra slow training. Owners seem to be in league with each other in this matter and do not appear anxious to reveal what their candidates can do.

DERBY SPECULATION.

There is a good deal of speculation as to the ultimate result of the Derby this year and readers will be glad to hear that on Wednesday, a special article will appear in the China Mail dealing with this year's Derby candidates. Meanwhile it is sufficient to say that the best performance to date is that of Trentbridge over a mile and a half on January 14, when the pony returned 3 minutes 26.2, with a last quarter of 31.1 the pony finishing full of running. Trentbridge did a better gallop than this last year when he was preparing for the Derby then.

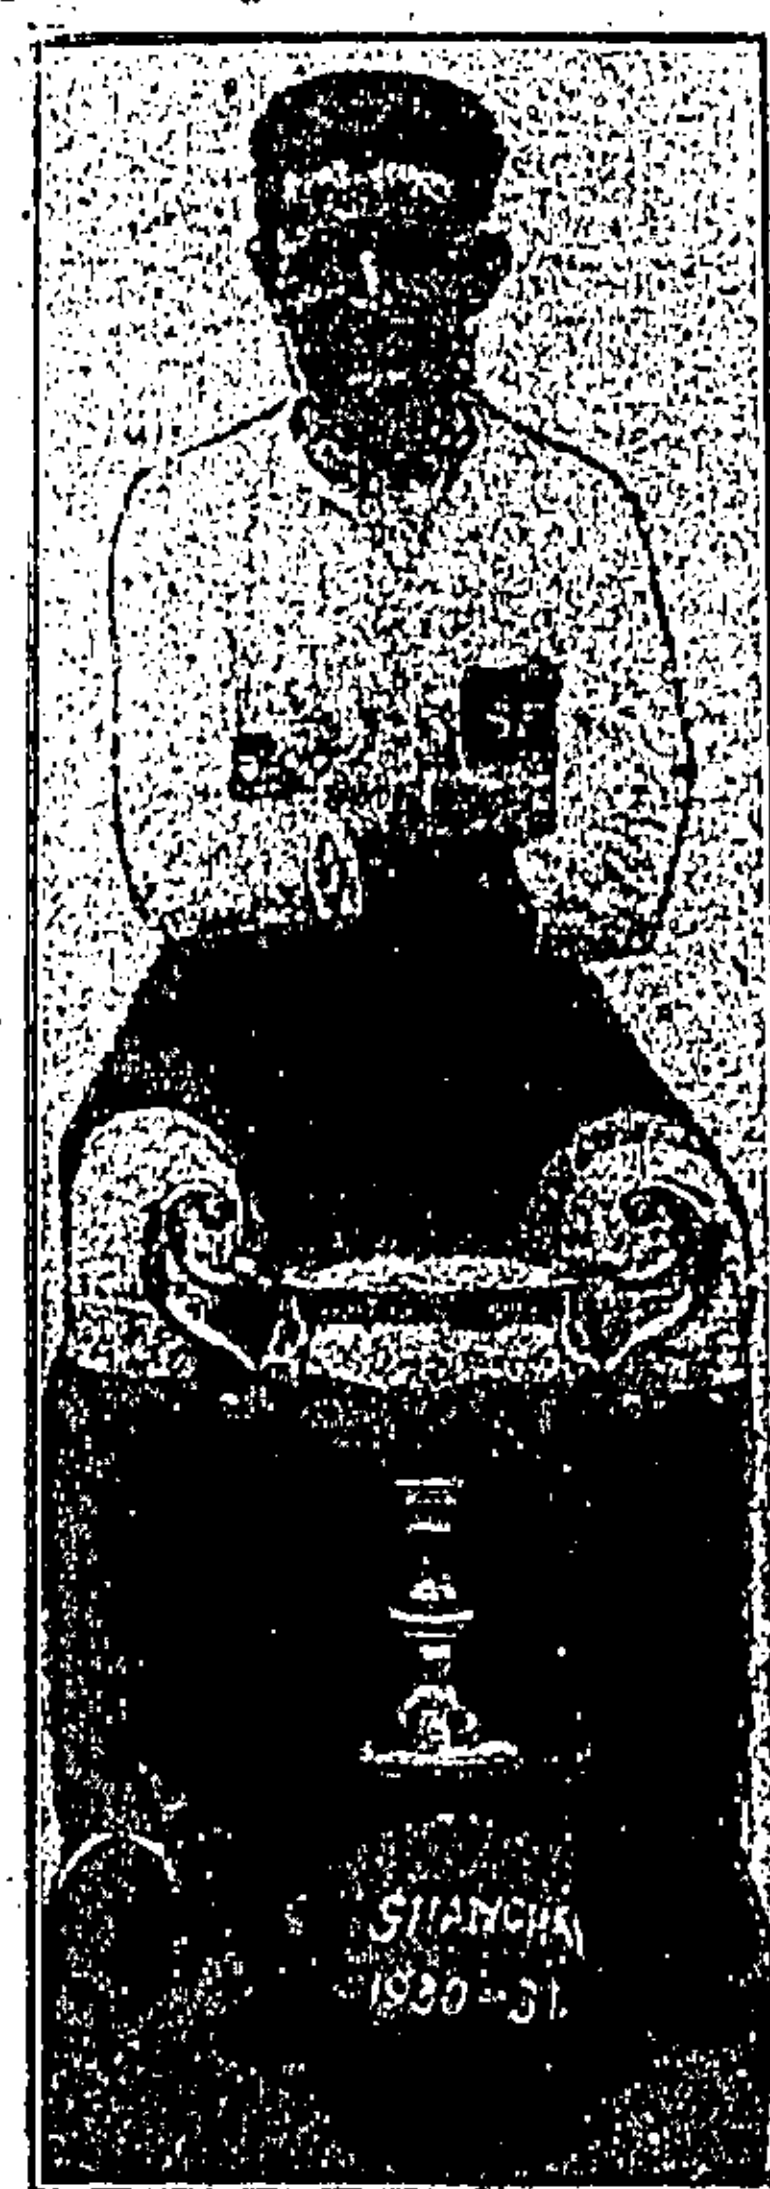

A good deal has been written about Coo Coo Bay and many think that this pony is a serious rival to Trentbridge. The pony galloped with all the Dunbar stable yesterday, but the performance was not very convincing. I will deal with this pony in my next article.

Prima Donna also is coming to the forefront as a likely looking pony. His performances during the week were convincing. Conack's Beauty is still improving and did some good gallops during the week, as did Tenorio.

NGTUK'S PROMISE.

Ngtuk came into the limelight during the past week and is now looked upon as one of the best Australian ponies. Mr. G. W. Sewell, his owner, rode him on Wednesday and sent him over a mile. The pony attracted a great deal of attention when he returned the time of 29.2 for the first quarter! Then his jockey pulled him in a bit, but notwithstanding this, Ngtuk covered the half mile in 1.02.3. Still going very strong, the animal covered the remaining half mile in 1.05, finishing "full of beans." Ngtuk has since been studied by the fans, some of whom see in him a second Polar Star, because Ngtuk seems to be every bit as muscular as last year's champion. He is certainly different to the other Australian ponies, and, while some think a world of him, others think he is more of the Wolin type than anything else, and is good for one short burst of speed and no more. Whatever the opinion of those who have studied Ngtuk there is no evading the fact that Ngtuk is the best thing so far for the Sydney Maidens.

Portia and City of Brisbane are two Australian ponies which the champion jockey, Mr. Leo Frost, is looking after. Portia is a good candidate and with proper training looks as though he will go a long way. City of Brisbane is a beauty to look at, but I am afraid that is about all there is in him for the pony has no class at all and is about the worst of this year's importations.

Ration is doing some fine work these days and his long swinging strides is calling a lot of attention to him. Ration if properly ridden at the Annual Meeting might prove to be a surprise packet, as during the week, many of those who saw him at work feel that he is a real stayer.

STICKYBEAK INJURED.

Readers will be sorry to hear that one of the best Australian ponies of this season injured himself during the past week. The animal is Stickybeak, and unless he is back at his usual training very soon, the injury may impair his chances at the Annual Meeting. This is a real pity as Stickybeak is a very good pony.

The Raincloud is doing nothing but slow work and last week he was ridden by Mr. Heard. If Mr. Heard is going to ride him at the Annual Meeting, The Raincloud is going to be among the plagues.

Many old ponies were seen during the week and those that are fit are doing very good work. Liberty Bay are still as good as ever. King's Bounty and Hotman look quite as good as they were at the last annual meeting, while Glentagles and Sitting Bull have lost nothing since they last raced.

GOLD KEY TO WATCH.

After these first-raters, come The Tiger, Valorous and Bright Star. All are going very well. I saw Gold Key in action recently and he is a real tryer. He will pay a surprise dividend at the big meeting if he keeps going as he is doing at the present time. Cyclamen Bay, which accounted for Apollo last year, is on the course, but does not appear to be at his best.

Racing Boy is galloped every morning and appears to be none the worse for it. His nearest rival, Blatko, is going "great guns." Whooped, Gallant Fox and Amy are all running well and Philander is doing some nice gallops these days.

VARSAITY MAKE GOOD DEBUT

Anderson's Brilliant Innings.

WOOD SCORES 28 WITH 7 SCORING STROKES.

Varsity Will Cause Upsets.

(By Athole.)

THE Civil Servants have fallen to pieces this year in the League. On Saturday they played their fifth game and suffered their fourth defeat. They have secured only 1 point out of a possible 15, and they have only two matches to play. Things do not look at all bright for the Valley Club.

J. E. RICHARDSON and H. G. Wallington added 76 valuable runs for the second wicket after E. Gosano had dismissed J. Barrow and F. J. de Rome for 39 runs, and it looked as if the Civil Servants had at last found their batting form. They, however, scored very slowly for a small ground such as Pokfulam, and were consequently forced to declare for 163 for 8—a total not beyond the abilities of D. J. N. Anderson and A. M. Rodrigues. Had the visitors chosen to hit H. Nomanbhoy instead of flatterer him during his three ordinary-looking overs there was every possibility of reaching 200, a safe enough total for half day cricket.

GOSANO howled at his fastest, but both Richardson and Wallington played him with confidence on the matting wicket which played very true. Gosano took his last four wickets for only 9 runs. Richardson hit eight boundaries in his 50. He has always found Pokfulam to his liking and has seldom failed on that ground. Wallington also had eight boundaries in his 44 before falling to the wiles of L. T. Jide. R. M. Wood made seven scoring strokes and totalled 28, and he was not out! Gosano bowled very well at periods, but he looked to be on the short side too frequently.

ANDERSON hit his third century of the season and participated in his fifth three-figure first-wicket partnership with Rodrigues this season. He was slow in settling down, but once he had played himself in he made the bowling look very second rate. He hit no fewer than eighteen boundaries in his 100. Rodrigues who contributed 64 to the stand of 160 runs, hit twelve boundaries in characteristic manner. He is probably the most dangerous batsman on the leg side in the Colony at the present time, and it will come as no surprise to see him selected for Hong Kong in November, as he is also a very fine fieldsmen. The Civil Servants may have regretted the absence of G. R. Sayer, their skipper and opening bat, and F. Baker, their fast bowler.

ANDERSON leaves for Home next month to study for the Bar. His absence will be keenly felt at the Varsity as he is undoubtedly one of the best all-rounders in the Colony, but they have excellent talent this season and should cause one or two upsets in the League. This was their first League match of the season.

THE Recreio juniors recorded their second successive win on Saturday when they trounced the University second eleven by nine wickets. H. A. Alves was in magnificent form with the ball, taking 6 for 19. Only B. K. Ng faced him with any confidence. Ng hit P. M. N. da Silva for a good six. Faced with 57 to win, Silva and A. Prata went about their task in a light-hearted manner, Silva hitting only two boundaries in his 45 owing to faulty timing. He played for the University last year. Prata was unfortunate to trample on his wicket when he looked set for a score. He is a pretty batsman to watch once he gets going. A. Gutierrez hit C. E. R. Clarabito for a six and collected six boundaries in a forceful innings for 48.

Tsui's Big Test In Fourth Round

Goldman May Reach Final Of Both Events

PROSPECTS OF PLAYERS IN 1933 TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS

(By Ex-Interporter).

(Special to The "China Mail.")

WE are now on the eve of another annual lawn tennis championship, and, as usual, speculation prevails regarding the prospects of the leading aspirants for honours. From the draw already published their positions have been fixed, and it only remains to be seen whether they will live up to reputation.

Tremendous rivalry exists for the Singles title, and I consider it will be more open than for many years past, while in the Doubles, E. C. Fincher and L. Goldman, encouraged by their success of being within an ace of capturing the title, from H. D. and S. A. Rumjahn, Colony champions since 1925, can embark on another attempt with renewed spirit and great optimism.

The draw for the Open Singles provides for interesting competition, and this factor should, it is hoped, raise the standard of play in the opening rounds, in contrast to the poor performances seen last year.

Tsui Wai-pul, the promising young Chinese player, on whom not a few have placed confidence in winning, is almost certain to meet S. A. Rumjahn, the holder, in the Fourth Round.

Tsui should encounter little opposition, but S. A. is quite likely to experience some difficulty in disposing of his cousin and partner, H. D., in the Second Round. The meeting of Tsui and Rumjahn is of great importance, and may have a definite bearing on the ultimate distribution of honours. Only three sets will be played in that round, and so much will depend on the form of the players on the day of the match, though owing to his wider experience and his good performances in the past, Rumjahn should commence the game a warm favourite. Others in the same quarter worth mentioning are W. C. Hung, A. E. P. Guest, and Y. Hachiluma, the promising young Japanese player who is now playing for Craigengower.

THE SECOND QUARTER.

In the second quarter, E. C. Fincher is the most prominent member of a group of sixteen players. He will meet with some opposition against H. Owen-Hughes and I. M. A. Razack, though neither player is good enough to interfere with his progress. Ng Kam-chuen will probably meet him for the right to qualify for the Fourth Round. To qualify to meet Fincher, Ho Ka-lau and J. W. Leonard are likely to engage one another in the Third Round. D. H. Hazell is in this section, and should be able to dispose of Tsoi Ping-fan, but I do not expect him to beat Leonard.

THE THIRD QUARTER.

Several good players are drawn together in the third quarter, the best being L. Goldman, S. A. Gray, Yew Man-kit, Tam Yee-tong, M. W. Lo and S. E. Green.

Tam is a promising young player, just under 20 years of age, who has had tournament experience at Hanoi where he was runner-up in the open singles championship last year. I expect to see him opposed to Yew Man-kit in the Second Round, and I think he will win, but against Goldman, who will in the First Round, and Gray, an improved player, Tam will probably lose. M. W. Lo has a pretty easy passage to the fourth round, as S. E. Green, the veteran ex-champion, is his only serious opponent. Goldman and Lo met in 1929, and the Chinese player won, but this time I think the former will reverse the decision, as he is playing better now, while Lo appears hardly able to stand the strain of a hard-fought singles match.

THE FOURTH QUARTER.

Comdr. Packer, the most serious contender among the newcomers, is in the fourth quarter together with Chiu Chun-chiu, Lu Tak-chouk, J. A. E. Cassumbhoy, Lai Kwong-tsun, and Ng Sze-kwong. He will in all probability account for D. S. Green in the First Round, and should dispose of Stocker and Chiu Chun-chiu, which would place him in the Fourth Round to await Ng Sze-kwong, Lai Kwong-tsun or Cassumbhoy. Ng Sze-kwong's attempt at a comeback is serious, and I believe he will be able to produce form nearly equal to that of 1927, when he last reached the Final Round, and for this reason I am inclined to think that he will reach the Fourth Round.

For the semi-final positions my choice falls on the following:—S. A. Rumjahn, (holder) E. C. Fincher, (runner up) L. Goldman and Comdr. Packer. Comdr. Packer should beat Ng Sze-kwong, who is now unable to stand a constant barrage of hard shots throughout a match, such as the Navy challenger is able to maintain. Packer's placements are accurate, and he combines with a hard hitting a safe all-round game which makes him a very aggressive player.

THE DOUBLES.

It is not so difficult to forecast in the Open Doubles. In the first tie, however, I am scratching my head to decide whether the Lo brothers will beat Comdr. Shaw and Comdr. Packer. It will be a fine match to watch, but I think the ex-champions will win. They should reach the Quarter Finals, where, in all probability, they will meet Hazell and Williams, who last year were the No. 2 pair of the Hong Kong Cricket Club. Here again, it is difficult to pick the winners. If all the four are in form, however, Hazell and Williams should emerge successful.

MIDDLE QUARTERS.

In the second quarter, Goldman and Fincher should easily reach the Semi-Final. With them are Lee Wai-tsoi and Luk Ding-chung, and A. H. Rumjahn and F. D. Pereira, as the best pairs.

The Rumjahn cousins, (the holders), Ng Sze-kwong and Tsui Wai-pul, Razack and Cassumbhoy, Chiu Chun-chiu and W. C. Hung, and R. Hancock and E. Grimbale, are bracketed together in the struggle for a place in the Semi-Final in the third quarter. Of these, the holders and Ng Sze-kwong and Tsui Wai-pul will, in all probability, meet in the third round when the champions should emerge comfortable winners.

THE FOURTH QUARTER. In the last quarter, Yew Man-kit and Ho Ka-lau meet Leonard and Hachiluma, who might cause an upset, but as the former are a resourceful pair, I expect them to survive and go on to the Third Round to meet A. E. P. Guest and E. F. Fincher.

My choice for the semi-finalists is:—D. H. Hazell and W. E. Williams, L. Goldman and E. C. Fincher, S. A. Rumjahn and H. D. Rumjahn, Ho Ka-lau and Yew Man-kit.

ACCORDING TO PLAN

"Good-morning. I've been thinking over some points in that new scheme of yours. It seems a good one. I congratulate you."

He pushed an open box of cigarettes across the table. Brinson took one and lit it.

"I know it's good. In a year or two it will be the most profitable line in the business."

Mr. Trobe laughed softly. "I shouldn't be surprised. It is astonishing how easily the public can be induced to part with money."

One would have thought that the thing they found it most difficult to make would have been the hardest to get out of them; but it's exactly the opposite."

"We'll get it out of them all right," Brinson retorted. "By the time we're through we'll have 'em running round in circles with their pockets hanging inside-out. It's lucky we've got the money to start it off."

Not by the tiniest sign did Trobe betray his reaction to the last words, though actually they amused him considerably. There would have been a very different expression on Brinson's face if he had known that not half the money he was counting on had any existence in fact. But Brinson did not know it; and Brinson was going to die without knowing it. Mr. Trobe smiled back pleasantly.

"Very lucky. We must be careful not to let our plans leak out before we're ready. You have not said a word to anyone except me."

Brinson shook his head. "Of course not. What are you doing this evening?"

For the life of him Mr. Trobe could not suppress a slight start at the unexpected question.

"This evening . . . ?"

"If you could come to my place and have some dinner we could go into the figures quietly afterwards. My wife's away, and I shall be dining early because the maids are going out."

Mr. Trobe preserved the most complete self-control. It was an ironical touch of fate that Brinson should have chosen that evening to invite him to a friendly dinner—the particular evening he had himself selected to visit Brinson for a very different purpose. But Trobe's visit was planned for a later hour and in a far more secret manner. He leant back in his chair, lighting another cigarette from the end of the previous one.

"I'm afraid I can't. If you'd mentioned it yesterday I might have managed it; but I have an engagement I must keep. It's too late to put it off now. To-morrow night if you like. By then I shall have had more time to go into the estimates and see exactly what is needed."

There was not the least suggestion on his face of an inclination to smile when Brinson replied that to-morrow night would do just as well.

He carried out his usual routine for the rest of the day with all his customary calmness and deliberation.

The only unusual thing he did was to complain to his secretary of a headache later in the afternoon. At half-past five he left the office, and went home.

He lived in an old-fashioned house at Richmond. It had belonged to his father, and although it was a good deal larger than was necessary for him, he was fond of it, and liked the garden. A middle-aged housekeeper looked after him. He was not a difficult man to please, so long as everything ran smoothly on the methodical lines he had laid down.

He began the evening's plan by exhibiting a want of appetite.

"I am sorry not to do justice to your excellent dinner, Mrs. Barnes, but I'm not feeling too well to-night. I've had a headache all day. I'll go to bed soon. A good rest will put me all right in the morning. You had better go up early yourself, and have a long night too."

At nine o'clock he had some hot whisky, and asked her for a couple of aspirins. Then he went up to his bedroom. He knew that nothing would induce her to disturb him. She would take his advice, and go to bed early, and she was a sound sleeper. He turned the key in the door, and went into his dressing-room. Opening a cupboard, he unlocked a suitcase, and took from it a light rope-ladder. This he fastened securely inside the window.

There was no danger that anyone would see him slip down the ladder. That side of the house faced away from the road, and was hidden by trees. The window was on the first floor. Not many feet from the ground. He left the ladder hanging there for his return, and crept round the house to one of the front gates. He waited inside until some people had passed and the road was clear. Then he slipped out and hurried away.

Brinson lived in a quiet square in South Kensington. Mr. Trobe heard a church clock chiming a quarter to ten as he knocked at the front door. He had to knock twice before Brinson opened it.

"Hullo! I thought you couldn't come."

It was easy to explain that his engagement had fallen through at the last moment, and he had come, after all, to discuss the figures. They went into Brinson's snugger, a comfortable room in which a good many successful schemes for the fleecing of gullible investors had originated. There were papers on the table relating to the new venture; several sheets covered with intricate calculations—for the use of funds which had long since passed into Mr. Trobe's personal possessions.

"I'm glad you've come," Brinson said. "We'll start with a drink. Whisky?"

"Thanks," said Mr. Trobe. Brinson got out another glass and a fresh siphon.

"Help yourself to a cigar. That box on the table. They're rather special. A present from a—so far—satisfied client. Very soon, I am afraid, his feelings will change."

Mr. Trobe took a cigar and mixed himself a whisky and soda. It would be easy to clean the glass and put it away before he went, so it would not be seen that there had been another person in the room.

SHOCKING PRISON REVELATIONS.

Government's Share.

One of the shocking aspects of this matter is that some of the States which lease out convicts to contractors make a handsome profit on the transaction, a fact which makes it more difficult to abolish the practice. The Federal Government is also responsible, since it could put an end to much of this exploitation by prohibiting the use in inter-State commerce of agricultural products which are the result of convict labour. (There is now a similar restriction against factory products manufactured in the prisons of the North.)

Whenever an American periodical publishes an article revealing the conditions among Southern convicts there is a flood of violent protest from "Southerners," ranging from demands to "let us alone" to assertions that the conditions described are now a thing of the past. It is true that the State of Florida some years ago passed a law prohibiting the leasing of convicts. This law was the result of another case like that of Mallefert, in which a Northern boy was beaten to death while working as a convict for a private contractor.

Such a law, however, does little to relieve the suffering of the prisoners, who are simply transferred from private operations to State enterprises, such as building and repairing roads, working in the buildings and grounds of State hospitals and asylums, and the like. That the Florida law did not produce a genuine reformation is indicated by the murder of Mallefert in that State only a few months ago. Meanwhile other Southern States continue to lease out prisoners and to leave them to the far from tender mercies of men who profit by working them as hard as possible.

According To Plan

He sat down in an armchair on the other side of the fireplace opposite to Brinson, a small table with their glasses and an ashtray between them.

Mr. Trobe was pleased with his own steadiness and composure. He was not at all nervous. He did not feel the least hesitation or regret, did them in a hurry, but I think I or shrink from his purpose for an instant. That purpose did not in any way prevent him from enjoying the particularly excellent cigar he had just lit. He leant back, smoking with enthusiastic appreciation.

"Pretty good, aren't they?" Brinson grinned. "He said I should find them worth smoking. He'll be sorry in a month or two. Probably want me to pay for them."

He launched out into his new plan. Mr. Trobe glanced at the clock. He wanted to get the thing done as quickly as possible, but there was no hurry for a few minutes. Brinson took up the sheets of figures and began to explain them. And from force of habit Mr. Trobe gave them the genuine attention

GERMAN DOCTOR DESCRIBES "IT."

A Race Between The Sex Genes.

Pasadena.
Dr. Richard Goldschmidt, the eminent German biologist, has explained to the California Institute of Technology the cause of "It."
It is just a race, he said, on the part of the sex-determining genes
—those invisible units of heredity that determine the character and behaviour of all living things.
In the girl or woman who has
"It," the female-determining sex genes have completely won the race.
All phases of degrees of maleness or femaleness are merely evidences of the status of the race of the genes in the development of the individual. — Reuter.

AMERICA'S ROAD DEATH ROLL.

(Reuter's Special Mail Service).
Washington.
A toll of 33,500 deaths, and injuries to more than 1,000,000 persons was exacted by traffic accidents in the United States in 1931.
The National Conference on Street and Highway Safety estimated the economic loss of the accidents, together with traffic more than $600,000,000.

Four Police Stabbed in Fighting

Abrupt Change.
This rather abrupt change of the tactics of the National Socialists, who for some time past had been rather quiet, living apparently in fear of new general elections which, on account of the prevailing ebb in the party's treasury and also on account of the growing signs of the tiredness of the German people of the National Socialist doctrine of salvation especially because of their lack of achievements, might have become disastrous to them, is naturally but the outcome of last Sunday's Diet elections in Lippe which found an interesting corollary in the municipal elections at Bruehl, an industrial town near Cologne.
As compared with the general elections on November 6 the National Socialists here increased their poll in about the same proportion as in Lippe, whereas here the Social-Democrats lost heavily while the Communists registered considerable gains. The Clerical Centre Party lost over 20 per cent.
but still maintain a first-rank position, with the Communists on the second place. The National People's Party lost slightly.
However, only in National Socialist circles it is believed that the result of these two elections will foreshadow a renewed rise of the National Socialist wave, and that this wave might then after all carry Hitler and his followers onto the top of the rock from which he may reign over the destinies of the German people.

Early Election.
From the Right to the Left the press is unanimous in forecasting early general elections and it is freely stated that Chancellor von Schleicher, in order to disturb business as little as possible, will make the interval and the electoral campaign as short as possible. This, supposing that the Reichstag will assemble on January 24 and that the motion of non-confidence is passed, polling day may be set for February 19.

This afternoon the Chancellor had a lengthy conversation with the leader of the Clerical Centre Party, Prolate Dr. Kaas when, it is understood, all possibilities were fully discussed in the expected event of Hitler remaining adamantly hostile to the present administration.

Always have GARDAN in the house!

In the tropics pain and illness are particularly liable to appear suddenly. In headache, toothache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, muscular pains, and above all in fever and its accompanying symptoms, GARDAN is of definite value.
When you are out of sorts remember:

GARDAN
prevents and stops pain
